Recruiter Recovery Center

FINAL SHOOTING SCRIPT

Hero :30 – Symptom Treatment

EXT. TRANQUIL GARDEN - DAY

ALEX happily talks to the camera behind BOB in a wheelchair – lightly engaged with his laptop – faint, content smile. Other patients mosey behind.

LOWER THIRD: Alex – Owner (Anti-Loxo Advocate)

ALEX

At the Recruiter Recovery Center, we know how stressful your job can be.

Alex crouches to place a flower in Bob's hair.

ALEX (CONT'D)

Our trained staff help you recover from the chaos of recruiting. Our–

She notices something on Bob's laptop screen.

ALEX

Is that [BLEEP] Loxo?

The camera points to the ground but keeps rolling.

ALEX O.S.

If these people find Loxo, we're out of business!!!

CUT TO:

Bob, now catatonic, has an unplugged, beige keyboard on his lap. Alex smiles as she wipes his drool from his face.

ALEX

There you go, friend.

(to camera)

Our proven methods will convince you that everything's fine.

Alex stands behind the wheelchair.

ALEX (CONT'D)

Soon you'll be back at your desk in the same broken routine.

SUPER: Stop treating symptoms. Achieve recruiting zen.

ALEX

(to O.S. producer)

How was that? Did I sound believable? That sounded good? Ok.

EXT. TRANQUIL GARDEN - DAY

JILL (25, robe, teased hair) slowly drags an upside-down rake through a small Zen sandbox.

ALEX speaks to camera.

ALEX

At the Recruiter Recovery Center,
we treat the symptoms of recruitment chaos.

Alex glances down.

ALEX

Ugh. Seriously?

Written in the sand: 'loxo?' Alex slides her foot through the message to obscure it.

CUT TO:

Alex smiling at the camera. Jill, deadpan, now holds a miniature rake.

ALEX

We'll get you back to the broken system that brought you here.

Alex places a comforting hand on Jill's shoulder.

Jill recoils.

SUPER: Stop treating symptoms. Achieve recruiting zen.

EXT. TRANQUIL GARDEN - DAY

ALEX sits at a small patio table across from JERRY (35, robe). A potted plant sits between them.

Jerry, wearing a straight-jacket, softly whispers to the plant.

JERRY (repeating)
Exciting opportunity...
Exciting opportunity...

ALEX addresses the camera.

ALEX
At the Recruiter Recovery Center,
we treat the symptoms of
recruitment chaos.

Alex gently slides the plant away – Jerry pauses.

ALEX
We'll get you back to that disconnected workflow in no time.

Jerry slowly leans toward another nearby plant.

EXT. TRANQUIL GARDEN - DAY

ALEX sits on the bench for an interview.

A crew member in black attaches a mic to her shirt.

PRODUCER O.S.
50 years in business. Incredible.
Why make your first ads now?

ALEX
[BLEEP] Loxo.

A patient in a robe walks into the background, happily typing with one hand on a laptop with a 'loxo' sticker.

PRODUCER
What did Loxo do?

ALEX
We treat the symptoms of recruiter burnout. They fix the problem.

A staff member walks into the background and tries to take the laptop from the patient.

The patient reluctantly lets go and follows the employee off-screen.

PRODUCER
And that's negatively affecting the business?

ALEX
I had to sell my second beach house.

The patient runs through the background, holding the laptop in the air – the staff chases in pursuit.

SUPER: Stop treating symptoms. Achieve recruiting zen.

Alex turns behind her.

ALEX
Hey, get that laptop!
Ugh, we just can't find good help.

Campaign Framework

Overview

Recruiters aren't burned out because of the job – they're burned out because their systems are chaotic. This campaign satirizes that idea with a fake "Recruiter Recovery Center" that treats the symptoms instead of fixing the problem.

References

- Happy Gilmore: Happy Place \(NSFW\)
 - Great aesthetic and vibe.
- Community: Trampoline Garden
 - Location is something to aspire to, although a bit out of our budget for something 1:1.
- SNL: 1-800-Flowers
 - Great aesthetic and fake commercial feel.

Structure

Hero :30 – Treating Symptoms

A fake wellness commercial intros the Recruiter Recovery Center, where burned-out recruiters go to "recover."

Pillar :15 – Burnout Ritual

A recruiter mindlessly rakes a Zen sandbox, surreptitiously signaling the real solution to recruitment chaos.

Pillar :15 – Outreach Obsession

A recruiter whispers "Exciting opportunity..." to a plant as part of recovery therapy.

(2x) CTAs – Reinforcement

Reinforce the campaign's core message and give the viewer an action to take. Each CTA uses a single visual metaphor.

Additional Hero :30 – Solution Focus

A mock interview reveals the real threat to the RRC: Loxo actually fixes the chaos causing recruiter burnout.

End-Card Strategy

The end card reframes the premise: instead of managing recruiting chaos, eliminate it with Loxo.

Core Takeaway

Recruiters aren't the problem. Their systems are.
